Police Stations and Trial

Saunders Law Ltd has provided a legendary criminal defense service to clients since the firm was established in 1974. Our comprehensive service includes representation at all stages of the criminal process – from attending the police station after arrest, to appearing at bail and committal hearings in the Magistrates’ Court, through to preparing cases for trial in both the Magistrates’ and Crown Courts.

Police Stations

What happens in interview under caution at the police station often determines the outcome of a criminal case. The interview is taped so its content is a matter of record. There is a right to silence, but in some circumstances its exercise can be criticised; a lawyer’s skill and experience under pressure is vitally important. Getting it right in the police station is not optional.

We provide a 24 hour emergency police station service with one of our lawyers always on call to attend the police station for clients who have been arrested. This service is accessed by calling our switchboard at any time - out of hours your call is automatically patched to our lawyer on standby

Magistrates’ and Crown Court

A person charged with a criminal offence always makes their first appearance in a Magistrates’ Court. We have a team of Magistrates’ Court advocates who are in the main London Magistrates’ Courts most days and offer the highest quality representation and advice.

Whether a case stays in the Magistrates’ Court or is transferred to the Crown Court we allocate one lawyer to each case, who provides the continuity that clients need. We give our clients a service that is personal to them. At times of stress clients do not want to have to be dealing with a different person every time they call or come into the office - the call centre is no part of our business model.

Saunders Law

Ltd

If a case is to be tried in the Crown Court we instruct either one of our in-house Higher Court Advocates or Counsel from a selected group of leading Barrister's Chambers. In particularly large or serious cases we may also instruct Queen's Counsel.

As the Legal 500 and Chambers Directory recognise, Saunders Law Ltd gives clients a service without compromise.
