Matthew read history at The University of Birmingham and subsequently undertook the Legal Practice Course, passing with Distinction in 2010.

His interest in law aroused after shadowing Michael Mansfield QC during the Lawrence Inquiry, Matthew is currently undertaking his training contract, working with James Saunders.

Having previously worked in public relations for major international law firm Wragge & Co, Matthew is working on developing the firm's internet presence and marketing strategy.

Gaining experience in civil recovery proceedings, criminal appeals and fraud work inside the office, he is also an accredited police station representative working throughout Central London.

Outside of the office, having only recently moved to London, Matthew is a fan of cycling around London and exploring his new home.

Matthew is a member of the Young Fraud Lawyers Association, The Young Legal Aid Lawyers Group and an active member of the Law Society's Junior Lawyers Division.
